Apparatus and Effect:

A classy Tiger Head, decorated in a riot of color, is shown. A spectator places his arm thru the open mouth. A solid plaque with a hole in the center to represent more teeth may be handed for examination. This plaque is deliberately pushed down thru the victims arm. The front falls open and there is the arm, encircled by the teeth. The plaque must be slid off the wrist before the spectator is free.

Method and Set-up:

Note how the outfit comes to you. There is a fake plaque at the back with a knob on it; then the teeth plaque in front of that; and then the hinged tiger face in front of all.

Presentation and Handling:

Start by showing the outfit and let the front fall open to show the teeth plaque. Close the front almost all the way, and as you do, pull the teeth plaque out and completely close the front. Hand the teeth plaque out. Take it back and show that it drops down in the lower section and would injure anything on its way down.

Turn the outfit sideways, so the audience can not see thru the mouth section, as you quickly pull the fake plaque up by the knob. There is a stop so it will come up the correct distance. Have a spectator push his arm through, with the hand at the front and fingers spread to make the hand appear as large as possible.

NOW....Push the fake plaque down with a crash, creating the effect of it penetrating the wrist. Immediately let the front fall open to show the wrist encircled by the plaque. Pull the plaques up (hold both as one) to show the wrist is really captured. Now have the spectator remove his arm. Close the front and place aside.

If desired, with the front open you can remove both plaques as one, place them in your table or case, then later remove just the unfaked plaque and leave the outfit around so snoopers may look it over.

Note:

Patter can be on the subject of the "TEST OF THE TROPICS." To pass the test of bravery before going into the deep tropics, the natives have a prop tiger head similar to this, but with real gold teeth. Let me show you what the test is. Put your arm thru the mouth, etc., etc.

Have Fun
